The Problem

5 months into a three year posting in Perth an assignee found himself and his family out of a home at short notice as his landlord had decided to exercise his break clause and terminate the lease.

Quite apart from the social upheaval for the assignee and his family, the risk assessment company he worked for were looking down the barrel of a lot of extra expense and hassle. At the very least there was likely to be considerable disruption to everyone's work life. They'd always handled their relocations in house but this time they decide they needed expert help. They decided to call Clearview.

The Clearview Solution

Realising time was of the essence we immediately sent a home search consultant to talk to the family involved and find out what it was they needed. It turned out they had moved several times recently and were now looking for a period of stability without the children having to move schools again. So the first thing we did was to liaise with the kids schools to find out their catchment area criteria. We then carried out an intensive property search and within two days had found the ideal home in the ideal location, with no need for school moves. Throughout the whole process we provided both the company and the assignee with the reassurance of a single and informed point of contact.

A Job's not finished until the paperwork is done

We then worked with the employer to make the move as painless as possible, including reviewing and advising on the lease to make sure the assignees home life wouldn't be similarly disrupted again.

The Outcome

By fixing the problem quickly, sympathetically and with the minimum of fuss everyone was able to get on with what they were supposed to be doing, saving hassle for the assignee and his family and time and money for the employer.
